

I am deeply concerned that the one-sided nature of media broadcasts paints an unrealistic understanding of the United States and our relationship with the world. This would only worsen with deregulation.

I would like to see the opposite trend take hold, where media is opened up to a variety of viewpoints. This would protect the communication industry from becoming a tool of propaganda for the wealthy or for the government.